WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Tuesday announced the retirement of Warren E. Burger as chief justice of the United States and said he will nominate Justice William Rehnquist to succeed him and become the 16th man to head the Supreme Court.

Upon Rehnquist's confirmation by the Senate, Reagan said he will nominate federal appeals court Judge Antonin Scalia to the Supreme Court, thus preserving a conservative majority on the high court.

Burger is 78, Rehnquist 61 and Scalia 50. If confirmed, Scalia would be the first American of Italian descent to serve on the court. He also would be the youngest member of the present court, which in November would have become, without Burger's retirement, the oldest Supreme Court in history.

With five of its members over 77, the court's average age today is 74. With Burger's departure and Scalia's arrival, the court's average age would be 71.

Scalia's presence is not expected to alter the court's ideological balance, but his youth and his recognized intellect could give the court a powerful conservative voice for decades to come.

If anything, Scalia is regarded as even more conservative than Burger, who is regarded as second only to Rehnquist in his politically conservative views.

On the issue of abortion, Burger's retirement will not change the court's position favoring a woman's right to end her pregnancy.

Burger was one of four court members who last week voiced reservations about the court's landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion. His departure still leaves five solid votes behind that 1973 ruling.

Scalia is a Roman Catholic and the father of nine children. A White House official who participated in the review of candidates for the post said that, although he was familiar with a number of Scalia's decisions, he did not know whether he ever participated in an abortion case.

Burger's retirement could produce one significant change in life at the Supreme Court — television cameras and other electronic coverage might be allowed. Burger is vehemently opposed to such coverage.

Rehnquist refused to say Tuesday whether he would like to change that, but electronic news coverage of the judicial process has spread through many state and local courts in recent years.

Burger's letter of resignation makes his retirement effective July 10, which is expected to fall a short time after the court ends its current session. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., whose Senate Judiciary Committee has jurisdiction over the appointments, promised to hold hearings "right away" and predicted both Rehnquist and Scalia would be confirmed.

Reagan made his surprise announcement to a packed White House press room, where reporters had been told only to expect an important announcement.

The president said Burger informed him three weeks ago that he had decided to retire after 17 years as chief justice to devote full time to his work as chairman of the commission that will lead the nation's celebration of the 200th anniversary of the Constitution in 1989.

Reagan said he immediately instructed Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and White House counsel Peter J. Wallison to make recommendations for a successor.

A senior White House official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said Reagan picked Rehnquist from a list of about a dozen potential candidates — all jurists — which was prepared for him. Reagan met with the justice about two weeks ago and offered him the job.

The president then selected Scalia from among others on the list, the officials said.

The official, who is familiar with the selection process and briefed reporters at the White House after the announcement, said Scalia was chosen largely because he is "one of the principal exponents of the president's philosophy of judicial restraint."

He described the philosophy as an approach to law in which "the courts do not assert their own authority to change or to modify or to strike down those laws that are adopted by the democratic branches, by the Congress or executed by the president, unless the Constitution specifically so requires."

The official insisted, however, that "there was no litmus test" for picking a justice on the basis of his specific beliefs and that Scalia was not subjected to any screening of his opinions on abortion or school prayer.

Biofeedback provides stress relief

By FRANCES L. BALL
Universe Staff Writer

Biofeedback may be the answer for those who want to learn to relax. It is a way to learn effective stress management in a country where 75 percent of all illnesses are stress-related.

The BYU Counseling and Development Center offers this service free of charge to anyone willing to come in and try it. Paraprofessionals are trained in operating the machines and counseling about effective relaxation techniques.

"Many students come in out of curiosity and others come in to work on specific tension-related symptoms," said Michael L. Maughan, coordinator of the biofeedback program.

Symptoms range from tension and migraine headaches to irritability to sleeping and eating disturbances. Biofeedback can help reduce these symptoms and teach clients to regulate their responses when they feel tension or stress coming on.

With biofeedback, an individual's physical body functions are fed back to him.

Machines monitor such body functions as muscle tension, skin temperature and brain waves, said Maughan. The machines function as "electronic mirrors" that transform signals into lights, meters or sounds so the subject can see how his body is functioning.

One of the machines in the lab measures skin temperature. Skin temperature differs from body temperature in that it fluctuates constantly, Maughan said. Body temperature generally stays around 98.6 degrees, but skin temperature can be anywhere from 75 to 85 degrees depending on the person's tenseness.

When stress goes up, blood goes into the central nervous system away from the capillaries that reach the hands. The result is cold hands, he said.

An electromyographic (EMG) monitors electrical activity in the skeletal muscles. Electrical impulses increase when the client is feeling stress and decrease when he is relaxed, Maughan said.

There was a time in the 1970s when biofeedback was very popular because people saw it as a health "cure-all." In the '80s, said Maughan, there is a more realistic view. "It is not a panacea and it is not necessarily a useful technique for everyone," he said.

There are several relaxation techniques that are used with the machines to help the student learn to regulate stress.

Most involve some kind of body scan in which the client starts at his feet and tries to relax every part of his body. Deep breathing, imagining pleasant scenes, talking one's self into relaxing are other techniques that can be used.

Tainted Excedrin capsules

Another dies from sabotaged pills

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — The maker of Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules asked stores nationwide to stop selling their product Tuesday after authorities here confirmed there was cyanide in capsules found in the home of a woman who died of cyanide poisoning.

A relative found Sue Snow, 40, a bank manager, collapsed in her home June 11, said Police Officer James Monnett. She died later that day at a hospital.

There were 56 capsules left inside a 60-capule Excedrin bottle found near where Snow collapsed, said Christopher Rezendes, assistant director of investigations for the Seattle office of the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Several of the remaining capsules contained significant amounts of cyanide, Rezendes said. The bottle of poisoned capsules was discovered Monday at the woman's home as about 150 people attended a wake at the house, said Jerry Christin, evidence and identification technician for the Auburn police.

Christin said the police had uncovered no evidence yet to indicate the death was a suicide.

"We're treating it as a homicide. That way we don't overlook anything," he said. The King County medical examiner's office confirmed Monday that Snow died of acute cyanide poisoning.

All Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were pulled from about 50 stores in the Auburn area south of Seattle after Mayor Bob Roegner declared a public emergency Monday.

"Although we believe this to be a local, isolated incident, we are also asking all stores throughout the United States to quarantine Excedrin capsules for the time being," Harry Levine, a vice president of Bristol-Myers, said in New York.

At least nine deaths, including that of a University of Texas student last month, have been linked to drug-tampering since seven people in the Chicago area died in 1982 after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol contaminated with cyanide.

A former stock brokerage clerk arrested last month was the first person to be charged with tampering with consumer products since the rash of poisonings began.

Skin temperature can fluctuate as much as 20 degrees. This sensor acts as a thermometer to measure skin temperature during biofeedback.

Not everyone is responsive to the same techniques, and the person has to be willing to invest time and energy. "Biofeedback is a skill," said Maughan. "You do a little at a time until you become proficient at it."

Maughan said that although studies have been done, no specific kind of person has been found that benefits the most. Maughan outlined two general requirements for those who might be most likely to benefit.

The first requirement is willingness to invest time and energy in learning to relax. "This is not a pill. It's not for the person that is looking for a quick fix," said Maughan. Laura Gomez, a graduate student in health education and one of the biofeedback paraprofessionals, agreed. "Anyone willing to put the effort in will get results," she said.

The second requirement is the person must be willing to tune into his body. "He needs to learn not to be externally oriented. He needs to look into himself and be aware of himself," said Maughan.

Many people think that if they ignore their bodies, they can control circumstances with a "mind over matter" attitude. But doing this on a consistent basis can be detrimental to their health, said Maughan.

Gomez said body awareness is the most important part of the program. The body gives off warnings. They need to be caught in the early stages or they get progressively worse," she said.

The client can learn to control stress before it turns into bigger symptoms, like heart attacks, rashes, or high blood pressure, she added.

Fire bomb blows BYU intern's day

By STEVE HAWKINS
Assistant Copy-Editor

Tuesday was BYU student Carolyn Tillman's last day as a Washington, D.C. intern for United Palestinian Appeal, an Arab-American charity organization. Tillman ended her internship differently than most students; Monday night the charity's offices were fire-bombed.

"I was going to stay late Monday night to work on a few things," said the Newberry Florida senior, majoring in political science. "But I had a feeling I should go." Tillman arrived early the next morning to a burned out office.

"On the elevator I smelled something funny ... and a lady stopped me from going around the corner. I told her I was trying to go to my office and she said, 'Well, you don't have an office anymore.'"

"The whole office looks like a fireplace," said Dr.

Bishara Bahbah, director of United Palestinian Appeal, Inc. (UPA) and Tillman's boss. Bahbah, a former-BYU professor of political science and BYU alumnus, spoke with the Universe before delivering a statement in a Washington news conference. Bahbah stressed that no one was injured in the bombing which occurred at 8 p.m. Monday, and called the fire-bombing a freak occurrence. Bahbah said the FBI and police are doing all in their power to locate the person or group involved, and that the UPA has also hired private investigators. He said he believes future BYU interns would be safe.

There are two BYU students scheduled to intern at UPA during the next six months and Washington Seminar Director Scott Dunaway said the students will likely go.

"We would like to have the students continue," Dunaway said. "We are concerned right now for their safety but we will treat it as a freak accident until we know more. It has been an excellent internship for us. They have treated the students very well."

Bahbah said he remains uncertain as to why anyone would bomb the charity, but is not ruling out political motives. "Our only concern is that many Arab-American organizations have been targeted ... who's next?"

Last fall, the Washington office of another Arab organization, The Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee (AADC), was fire-bombed. At that time the AADC was also headed by a former BYU professor, Dr. Omar Kadar. Unlike the ADC, which is an outspoken political organization, the UPA works strictly with humanitarian relief. The charity is currently building a nursing college in Jerusalem and provides scholarships and community development to impoverished and oppressed Palestinians.

Alpine School District sets '87 budget at $91.9 million

The Alpine School Board tentatively approved a $91,900,000 budget last week as the anticipated amount needed to finance the 1986-87 school year.

The budget is a tentative one, said Dr. Richard Sudweeks, board president. The amount will be revised when other figures become available, he said.

The cost of each day for next year was estimated at $250,000 per day, said Dr. Clark Cox, district superintendent. The estimates for the budget were established from a student increase of 4.2 percent, assessed valuation increase of one percent, and same tax rate on each fund.

Other business included the action of the extended-year program at the Dan Peterson Elementary School. The special education elementary will begin the school year July 28. Students will attend for nine weeks with three week breaks in between each session. School will be out for most of month of July.

Priest shortage is Catholic 'crisis'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The shortage of priests and lay workers has reached "crisis" proportions, the head of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said Tuesday.

Bishop James H. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, also said there are "encouraging signs that the vocation crisis may be able to be turned around."

Malone spoke at a news conference at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport following the conclusion of an eight-day retreat by U.S. Catholic bishops at Collegeville, Minn. The retreat, which ended Monday night, focused on problems of church-related vocations.

"I believe there is a recognition among the bishops, generally speaking, that there is a crisis," Malone said.

The session, however, drew no conclusions.

French chef sends chocolate liberty

PARIS (AP) — She was tempest-tossed by rain and hail, and a hot sun threatened to melt her into a sticky mass, but a 5,500-pound chocolate model of the Statue of Liberty finally set out intact Tuesday for the New World.

The mammoth confection, which stands 13-feet high, is the work of Paul Berthon, a master pastry and chocolate chef. He and two assistants spent three 100-hour weeks fashioning the bitter-dark Miss Liberty, but the Paris weather made the "bon voyage" part the most difficult.

The temperature climbed to 82 degrees.

"Chocolate melts in the sun," Berthon said softly, with quiver in his voice, "and it's coming out."

Berthon left his job as head pastry chef to Paris' prestigious Fauchon specialty store to create his Miss Liberty.

His masterpiece will be to auctioned after July 4 for New York City charities.

New owner for old Osmond studio

OREM, Utah (AP) — The former Osmond Studios, built by the singing Utah family, has been purchased by Summit International Studios for an unspecified amount, the company said.

The facility, which was the home of the "Donnie and Marie Show," a 1970s variety program starring two members of the pop music family, had been sold by the Osmonds about three years ago to an insurance company.

Announcement of the purchase was made by Summit President Paul D. McAmis, who said the company is negotiating for three network series and one first-run syndication series to be produced at the studios.

McAmis said Summit has been using the 120,000-square-foot facility for television and film production. It was used to produce national commercial spots as well as several Disney cable shows, he said.

American patriot Kate Smith dies

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kate Smith, whose rousing rendition of "God Bless America" and unflagging wartime fund-raising made her an enduring symbol of joyful patriotism, died Tuesday of respiratory arrest. She was 79.

Miss Smith died at the emergency room of Raleigh Community Hospital, where she was taken after being stricken at her home, said nursing supervisor Mike Leisner.

Miss Smith, one of the most popular entertainers on radio during the 1930s and 1940s, had no formal music training. She called her voice a "God-given gift."

More than 700 of her songs made the Hit Parade, but she was most closely identified with "God Bless America," making it a virtual second national anthem and inspiring her nickname, "radio's own Statue of Liberty."

Pres. Benson suffers flu-like distress

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson was hospitalized Tuesday afternoon for observation after suffering "flu-like distress," a spokesman said.

Benson, 86, was admitted to LDS Hospital about 4:30 p.m. where he was reported in satisfactory condition, said Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Cahill said Benson was expected to remain hospitalized for 48 hours. The church leader was "suffering from a flu-like distress" but was conscious when admitted to the hospital, Cahill said.

Benson had been hospitalized Jan. 11-13 after a fainting spell.

Jury still undecided about Miller's fate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors deciding the fate of former FBI agent Richard Miller failed to reach a verdict in their second day of deliberations Tuesday in his espionage trial.

Deliberations began Monday in the federal court, the only FBI agent accused of spying. Miller's attorney has described him as a well-meaning patriot, while prosecutors portrayed him as a greedy spy for the Soviet Union.

Before they retired for the day, the jurors sent a note to U.S. District Judge David Kenyon, asking a question that indicated they are considering the last part of the indictment against Miller.

The question had to do with the difference in wording in the indictment and the judge's jury instructions. Kenyon sent them a note back telling them to follow his jury instructions, not the wording of the indictment.

The jurors were concerned about three counts that charge Miller with soliciting and accepting bribes. The question indicated they had already discussed the more serious espionage counts.

Miller, 49, worked in the counter-intelligence section of the FBI's Los Angeles office until his arrest in October 1984. He is charged with conspiring to pass secret documents to the Soviet Union in exchange for a trench coat and $65,000 in gold and cash he never received.

If convicted, Miller could be sentenced to life in prison.

The jury in the first trial, which ended in November, deliberated for 71 hours over 14 days before deciding it was hopelessly deadlocked. Jurors voted 11-1 in favor of conviction on some counts and 10-2 for conviction on others.

This time, both the prosecution and defense are relying heavily on the defense testimony of Miller's Soviet lover, Svetlana Ogorodnikov. Mrs. Ogorodnikov, 36, pleaded guilty a year ago but changed her story on the witness stand and claimed both she and Miller were trying only to help the FBI. She insisted she was not a spy and Miller was not a traitor.

She and her husband, Nikolay, 53, are serving federal prison terms.

Defense attorney Stanley Greenburg, in his final summation, portrayed Miller as a patriotic FBI agent who believed he could win glory by infiltrating the KGB.

The prosecutor said Miller clearly knew he was doing wrong when he became sexually involved with Mrs. Ogorodnikov and gave her classified documents.

Art teachers to brush up at BYU summer workshop

Local art teachers are gathering at a BYU summer workshop this week to brush up on the current teaching trends in art education.

Dr. Michael Day, BYU professor of Art Education, is instructing art teachers and elementary teachers in new curriculums and approaches in art. The discipline-based art education (DBAE) is highlighted.

The teachers are learning how to present the subject in a manner that will enable their students to gain an understanding of art. The teaching goals include developing skills in art criticism and understanding the relation of art to the history of man and various cultures.

The workshop also stresses the importance for students to be able to see the role of art in society today as well as in the past and future.

BYU will hold leadership program for Indian youth discovery and self-development.

They are preparing two shows for the public as part of the conference. On Wednesday at 8 p.m., there will be a performance in 185 RB. They will demonstrate what Indians can do without words.

On Saturday at 7 p.m., there will be a talent show in room 258 Harmon Building.

Jazz music currently 'on the upswing'

How to combine talents of several local musicians

ANGELA M. SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Jazz music seems to be on the upswing in popularity, so a few musicians in Provo are getting together to create a new show, called "Back to Jazz."

The show, called "Back to Jazz," will feature sounds from the "Big Band" era, modern jazz dancing and including songs from the "Manhattan Transfer."

Musicians are local. Most of those participating in the program are local musicians who were recruited by Brian Galloway, owner of a local graphics firm and director of Consort Productions, which is sponsoring the show. He said most of the people in the program are talented friends and associates whom he worked with during past productions.

This is the third production Galloway has sponsored in two years. Productions have included "Up America," which he sponsored two years ago, and a Christmas show.

He is doing this to enjoy the music experience while providing a show. All of the people in the program have an internal drive to enter the music world.

All performers are professionals. The performers are professional musicians who have excelled in their careers. Galloway said the performers include several BYU students and graduates who have been involved in the music program in some aspect.

Galloway himself was a member of BYU's A Cappella Choir, Vocal Jazz Ensemble and Men's Chamber Choir. Professionally, he has sung with the Promised Valley Playhouse and the Utah Opera Company.

A former member of The Young Ambassadors, Sherree Fitzgerald, from Walnut Creek, Calif., now teaches music and P.E. at Alpine Elementary School.

She continues her musical talent by singing and recording inspirational music for the LDS Church.

BYU graduate Craig Turley now plays professional saxophone for performers who come to the area. He also works for a Salt Lake City-based firm writing jingles for radio and television.

Sheri Everett, one of the six jazz vocalists, is a sound engineer at Bonville Communications. Her husband, Steve Everett, is pursuing a career in stage production and concert management.

Arlen Wilcock, who is currently working on his master's at BYU, is an instructor in Educational Media at Ricks College.

Wilcock, also a former member of The Young Ambassadors, has made a special effort to participate in the program, traveling from Idaho.

"Dancers 'highly competitive' The dancers are 10 members of the highly competitive group 'Jazzin' directed by Garth Paey. Originating in Salt Lake City, the group has relocated in Provo to accommodate the members of the group who are mainly from Utah Valley who are attending BYU.

The program will also include six former and current members of "Synthesis," an award-winning jazz ensemble from BYU.

Director Ray Smith, music professor and director of Jazz Studies at BYU, has carefully selected songs that will appeal to the general audience including the new sound of "jazz-fusion," a sound that combines the rock beat with the feeling of jazz, according to Smith.

Some numbers performed by the instrumentalists will include old favorites such as "My Funny Valentine," "In the Mood," "Old Man River" and "Sweet Georgia Brown."

Galloway said he enjoys all music and enjoys watching the trends, especially the influence of jazz in today's contemporary music.

"Jazz is rich. There is a great wealth of music in jazz," he said. "It is the only original and authentic American music."

It is representative of a revival of the American spirit.

One of his favorite pieces, "Love Me or Leave Me," fits well in the program because of its "sassy" flavor, he said.

Several local jazz artists will join together for a production to take place Thursday and Friday at 8:15 p.m. at the Scera Shell in Orem.

BYU-TV sponsors new club created exclusively for kids

ANGELA M. SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

The newest club on campus is not for students—at least not for college students. It's for kids.

BYU-TV Channel 11 is fostering a KBYU Kids' Club. It is open to all ages in the KBYU-TV viewing area. This includes all of southern Idaho.

Through the idea of beginning a club was generated some time ago has not been put into full swing now. There are currently more than 100 members.

The whole purpose is to get kids involved with the programs they see on TV, said Shelley Hammond, deputy director of KBYU.

They like to belong to clubs and groups, said Cindy Richardson, membership director for KBYU-TV.

"We want to give them a worthwhile fun thing to be involved in."

The club is also designed to get parents more involved in what their kids are watching.

"Educational programs do more good if parents are involved in reviewing what the kids have seen," said Richardson.

Each club member receives a special club newsletter periodically and a laminated Sesame Street poster on his birthday.

"The newsletter will keep the kids informed on upcoming children's programs and specials and various club activities," said Richardson.

A tour of KBYU Channel 11 is also part of the membership package.

Several other treats have also been donated to the club.

Hansen Planetarium has donated passes, and noted children's author Clay M. Robinson has donated copies of his story "The Forest of Never-See-Grin."

KBYU-TV is affiliated with Public Broadcasting Systems, which deals in educational programming.

At this time, KBYU's programming includes five children's shows: "Polka Dot Door," "Timmy and Lassie," "Sesame Street," "Mr. Roger's Neighborhood" and "Today's Special."

The station recently added a sixth children's program called "Boomerang."

For more information about the club, contact Cindy Richardson, C-302 HFAC.

Draughty tops NBA draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Brad Draughty of North Carolina was chosen by Cleveland as the first pick in the NBA draft Tuesday after the Cavaliers obtained the top selection through a trade with the Philadelphia 76ers.

In a deal completed at about 11:30 p.m. EDT Monday, 30 minutes before a league-imposed trade embargo, the 76ers gave the top pick to the Cavaliers in exchange for veteran Roy Hinson and future considerations.

Draughty, a 7-foot center-forward, was the second No. 1 pick in Cavaliers' history. He will not turn 21 until Oct. 21 although he played all four years at North Carolina. He is the Tar Heels' all-time field goal percentage leader with a .700 mark and he averaged 20.2 points per game his senior season.

The NBA champion Boston Celtics, using a pick acquired from Seattle in exchange for Gerald Henderson in 1984, selected Len Bias of Maryland. The 6-8 forward finished his career as the Terrapins' all-time leading scorer, with 81 points ahead of Albert King, now of the New Jersey Nets.

Bias averaged 23.2 points and 6.8 rebounds as a senior and was a first-time All American and Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, finishing second in Draughty.

The Golden State Warriors, who finished last in Pacific Division, made 6-11 Chris Washburn of North Carolina State the third consecutive ACC player picked. Washburn, who missed most of his freshman season because of disciplinary problems, averaged 17.6 points and 6.7 rebounds during his sophomore year, leading the team in both categories.

Washburn was one of the most highly recruited players in history out of high school in Hickory, N.C. He was a Parade Magazine high school All-American for three years.

He was the first of the underclassmen who devalued their eligibility for the draft to be selected.

Chuck Person of Auburn was a surprise fourth pick by the Indiana Pacers. The 6-8 forward averaged 21.5 points per game as a senior to become his school's all-time leading scorer and No. 3 in the Southeastern Conference.

Person had been projected by many as going to New York with the fifth pick, while 7-foot Byron Bedford of Memphis State had been expected to go in the top four.

Kenny Walker of Kentucky was taken by the Knicks, despite the chant of "Berry, Berry" from the fans at the Felt Forum who wanted the hometown team to select Walter Berry of St. John's.

Walker, a first-team All-American, was the third all-time leading scorer for the Wildcats and the SEC player of the year as a Junior, leading the conference in both scoring (22.9) and rebounding (10.2). Despite being double- and triple-teamed most of his senior year, he still averaged 20.0 in his final season.

Bedford dropped to the No. 6 pick, by the Phoenix Suns. The 7-foot center from Memphis State followed Washburn as an eligible underclassman after the Tigers after his junior year. Bedford averaged 17.3 points and 8.5 rebounds in his final season, and his 324 blocked shots over his three-year career placed him second at Memphis State behind Keith Lee. His scoring average improved by five points per game between his sophomore and junior years.

Roy Tarpley of Michigan, 6-10, 230-pound forward, was the seventh pick, by the Dallas Mavericks. Tarpley averaged 15.9 points, 9.1 rebounds and 3.0 blocked shots for the Wolverines, but his stock fell somewhat after his junior season when he scored 19.0 points and grabbed 10.4 rebounds and was a consensus Big Ten Conference player of the year.

Tarpley, who gained about 30 pounds since high school, finished as Michigan's sixth all-time leading scorer despite getting only 92 points in his freshman year.

The Cavaliers, with their second pick of the first round, made Ron Harper of Miami, Ohio the first backcourt player selected. The 6-6 Harper averaged 24.4 points and 11.7 rebounds while playing forward for Miami and was named Mid-American Conference player of the year. He was ranked in the top five in the country in scoring, rebounding and steals in his senior year.

Brad Sellers of Ohio State, who transferred from Wisconsin after two years, was ninth pick of the first round, by the Chicago Bulls. Although he's a 7-footer, Sellers is projected as forward in the NBA.

Sellers improved his stock considerably in his senior year by averaging 19.8 points and 12.6 rebounds and concluded his final college season by being named most valuable player of the National Invitation Tournament, won by the Buckeyes.

The San Antonio Spurs made Johnny Dawkins of Duke the fourth ACC player and second guard selected in the first round. Dawkins finished as Duke's all-time leading scorer, and scored in double figures an NCAA record 129 times. The 6-2, 165-pound Dawkins also was the first player in ACC history to finish with more than 2,000 points, 500 rebounds and 500 assists.

John Salley of Georgia Tech became ACC pick No. 5 in the first round when he was selected by the Detroit Pistons. Salley had a subpar 1985-86 season after he was projected as a high 1986 selection. But the 7-foot Salley was named most valuable player of the postseason Aloha All-Star Game, hitting 18 of 20 shots from the field, and that performance impressed the Pistons enough to make him their first-round pick.

The Pistons were looking for a shotblocker and hope that Salley can fill that bill at both center and forward.

John Williams of Louisiana State, a 6-9 sophomore, was selected No. 12 by the Washington Bullets.

BYU baseball fans will tell you they always knew former BYU student Cory Snyder would make it in the big time.

Not only is he there, but Snyder has been getting some timely hits with the Cleveland Indians after being called up from the AAA Major League last week. Snyder, 23, stroked a triple Friday, single Saturday, and his first homer in the Major Leagues on Sunday.

The rookie's managers predict he is here to stay. One reason is that he's a fast learner. A curve ball tossed by Minnesota's Frank Viola struck him out in one of Snyder's first plate appearances, but it's also the identical pitch he used Sunday to lift one over the wall.

An infielder at BYU, he now roams the outfield for Cleveland. Snyder's present tenure isn't all roses, however. He let a bat fly into the stands while in Maine, injuring two women. Considered more as a unfortunate accident, Snyder could face some fines and/or probation, according to a report from the Associated Press to report on statutes in the Rochester Municipal Court.

Snyder has not commented on the incident, and no one else is talking about it either until he stands before the charge.

Snyder was an instant slugging star at BYU, the first player in NCAA history to hit at least 20 homers in three consecutive seasons. He also hit .400 for the 1984 Olympic team. But Snyder got off to a slow start for the Indians' farm team, Class AA Waterbury.

While others like Wally Joyner seemed to be an "instant success" (after much hard work), Snyder has come around a little more slowly. But arrive he has. Snyder's manager Pat Corrales says the outfielder could be around a long time.

"No doubt about it. He is a top prospect for us. I also liked his glove out there in making a diving catch of a sinking liner in Sunday's loss to Minnesota. He has more than just batting potential."

Corrales adds that Snyder's greatest challenge right now is to get

Open winner Pirates and Cards to replay looks ahead

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Ray Floyd's next challenge is the British Open in Turnberry, Scotland, July 17-20.

There he will have the opportunity to join the ranks of the greatest players in golf history.

Floyd's victory in the 86th U.S. Open in Sunday put him in position to join a plateau that includes Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen as the only golfers who have won the four major championships.

to know the pitchers. They are getting the book on him. He will have to go as well on them to hold his own. Sometimes, he doesn't look like he has a great batting style out there, but the only thing which counts now is how well he delivers."

Snyder joins a long list of BYU graduates in the last few years, including Danny Ainge, and Jim McMahon and others who have made the name BYU well-known in sports circles. Now a remark that he is from Brigham Young is made rather casually regarding top athletes.

It would appear Snyder could be in that super-star status if he measures up to the confidence the Indians have in him.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — National League President Charles S. Feeney Tuesday upheld the Pittsburgh Pirates' protest that umpire-in-chief John Kibler prematurely called Monday night's game against the St. Louis Cardinals on account of rain.

Feeney rules the game will be completed Wednesday at 6:35 p.m. with the Cardinals batting in the sixth inning and leading 4-1. The game will be finished before the two teams' regularly scheduled contest.

The Pirates protested after Kibler ruled the game was official following rain delays of 17 and 22 minutes. Pirates' pitcher Rick Rhoden managed to throw only two pitches between the delays, which were brought on by heavy rains and whipping winds.

Feeney said Kibler failed to follow either the Official Baseball Rules, which require a 30-minute delay before a game can be called, or an NL directive mandating at least a 75-minute wait after an initial rain delay of 45 minutes after a second stoppage of play.

When Feeney notified the Pirates of his decision, he said that Kibler, a 21-year veteran, concurred in his decision.

Jazz pick Curry fifteenth

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz, their hopes for getting a big man dashed by teams picking ahead of them, chose Virginia Tech guard Del Curry as their first-round choice in the 1986 NBA college draft.

Curry, who averaged 24 points per game his senior year, was described by Jazz head Coach Frank Layden as one of the "greatest shooters in the college game."

Jazz coaches had hoped today's deep and talented NBA college draft would yield a power forward or center, and had narrowed their probable choices to four undergraduates.

Jazz chief scout Scott Layden said the Jazz, who picked 15th, would likely wind up with Walter Berry of St. John's, John Williams of Louisiana State, John Salley of Georgia Tech or Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse.

But Frank Layden said the Jazz picked too late. "When you get down to 15, you don't always have control over who you pick. But I tell you we're getting a great player."

Curry, a 6 foot 5, 195-pound guard, was the second-team All-America selection this year. In pre-draft reports, scouts likened Curry to New Jersey's Otis Birdsong.

"He's considered one of the greatest shooters in the college game," Layden said.

Rookies not instant stars

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the favorite Phrases of NBA scouting chief Marty Blake is "immediate gratification."

Blake believes that virtually every player taken in the first round of today's NBA draft could eventually become a star.

The problem, Blake says, is that teams and their fans want rookies to step in and become a big contributor from the first game.

Such "immediate gratification" rarely occurs, according to Blake.

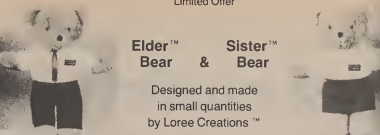

"It doesn't work out that way," he said. "Houston had Ralph Sampson No. 1 and Rodney McCray No. 3 three years ago and the Rockets still finished last. You can't look at the success of a rookie class just by looking at its first years. It takes two or three years at least."

But Blake called the 1986 draft the most outstanding in a decade.

"Even if Philadelphia and Boston were picking 23rd and 24th instead of 1-2," Blake said, "they would get a good player because this is an outstanding draft. You can't expect immediate gratification from these players, but many of them will be stars in the future."

Philadelphia and Boston picked first and second in the draft because of earlier trades with the Los Angeles Clippers and Seattle, respectively, and their good luck in the draft lottery on May 11.

French triumph over Italy

CHICAGO CITY (AP) — Italy's reign as king of the world is over, ended by the Prince of Midfield. Michel Platini, generally regarded as the best midfielder in the world, scored once and dominated the action as France beat the defending World Cup champion Italy at Olympic Stadium. The French advanced to the semifinals against Brazil with their first Cup victory since 1938.

Italy's other game had Morocco playing West Germany. The Italians won the 1982 tournament in Spain, earning their third world championship. But this time, they could not match the French, whose defense was virtually impenetrable.

They could not stop Platini who, ironically plays for Juventus, the Italian league champion.

They feel great satisfaction to have beaten the defending champions, Coach Henri Michel said. "It is very important because France hadn't beaten Italy in a competitive tournament match since 1920."

They could have scored more goals. I managed to take advantage of my players and to control the game of their own qualities."

Probably didn't have to convince Platini of how good he is, Platini himself admitted before the game that he had not played at his best in France's first-round games. On Tuesday, he was magnificent.

Platini scored his first goal of the tournament in the 14th minute. A superb pass from Dominique Rocheteau on the left wing found Platini near the top of the penalty area, and he sent the ball past charging goalkeeper Giovanni Galli at 14 minutes.

Yannick Stopyragot the other goal at 57 minutes. Midfielder Jean Tigana made a darting run and sent the ball to Rocheteau. He shrugged off a tackle and freed Stopyra scored from close range. It was only the fifth French win in 28 international meetings between the nations. There have been six ties.

France plays Brazil on Saturday in Guadalajara in a third-round contest.

Italian Coach Enzo Bearzot wasn't fooling himself about the outcome.

"We were no match for them," he said. "We tried our best. I flatly reject any criticism of the players. They tried hard and they never surrendered."

"They had the heart I expected a defending World Cup team would have, but it wasn't a good day for us and France played at its best."

Floyd drives for 4th major title

EDMONTON, N.Y. (AP) — Ray Floyd's next big test is the British Open in Turnberry, Scotland July 10.

He will have the opportunity to join the ranks of the greatest players in golf history.

Floyd's victory in the 98th U.S. Open on Sunday put him in position to join a plateau that includes Jack Nicklaus, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen as the only players who have won the four major championships.

Previous winners of the U.S. Open include Tom Watson, who lacks a PGA title to round off their brilliant careers.

Watson has just missed winning all four majors and the ones they lack are Sam Snead, U.S. Open; Ben Hogan, Masters; Byron Nelson, British Open and Tiger Palmer, PGA.

Winning the U.S. Open has always been one of my goals and now I have a chance to become only the second man to win all four," said Floyd, who shot a final 66 for a 270 total. "I just lack the British Open and after that, I'll have a lot of zest and zeal when I get there."

Floyd also has major victories in the 1969 and 1976 U.S. Open and the 1982 PGA. He has won four U.S. Open titles in more than $3 million, including Sunday's first prize of $115,000. He's been a member of six Ryder teams and won the 1983 Vardon Trophy.

Floyd's two-shot victory in the U.S. Open was triumph of age and experience over a treacherous Shinnecock Hills' layout that frustrated some of the youngest and most talented players in the game.

Floyd, who has a golf bag with "Silver Pages" stenciled on it, became the oldest player to win the U.S. Open. He was born Sept. 4, 1942. Ted Gray won the 1920 U.S. Open when he was 43 years, 4 months, and 16 days.

However, Floyd can't shoot for the "golden oldie" of the British Open. Old Tom Morris won it once when he was 46. Floyd had never competed well in the U.S. Open. He also hadn't threatened strongly to take a British Open.

In fact, he said, "I figured this was my last chance to win it (the U.S. Open). This was the highest I had ever been in contention."

In 22 U.S. Opens, Floyd had only finished in the top 10 on just two occasions. "I was to the point in my career where I was wondering whether it would ever happen."

Floyd's last victory among the players on the PGA Tour.

Now, it's on to Turnberry which is often referred to as Scotland's Pebble Beach. It's a tough links course where Tom Watson defeated Jack Nicklaus in a memorable 36-hole duel in 1977.

"I'm happy for Ray," said Masters' champion Nicklaus. "I've never seen him so emotional. The old guys are doing pretty good. Who needs the Seniors Tour?"

Club to compete in Summer Games

Ghetto Magic athletic club men's fastpitch softball has been chosen to represent the Eastern Utah in the softball competition at the Utah Summer Games. The games will be held in Cedar City on July 24-26 for a total of 270 teams.

U campus and participates in intramural competition. The Ghetto men were given a berth in the All Flag Football tournament in New Orleans. The club finished in the top 16 teams in the 72-team event and recorded a top 20 ranking in the final UPI poll of the flag football teams.

The Ghetto men and women athletic teams have won a total of 14 intramural titles since 1983. Involvement in men's 4A softball, 4A flag football, water polo (3), 4A water basketball, and 4A co-ed (3).

Ghetto Magic men also captured Utah state titles in flag football and flag football last year.

Fastpitch softball is something relatively new to Ghetto Magic. "We formed a team last year to compete in the summer league in Pleasant Grove because we were tired of playing slow-pitch," said Scott Hildebrand, the team's pitcher.

In their first year in the league the Ghetto men placed second in the "C" class and gained a berth to the Utah state tournament where they placed fifth. That earned the team a spot in the regional tournament in Salt Lake where they finished third.

"Because of our record in the league and tournaments, and the fact that we are a young team, we were selected by the regional director to represent the region at the Summer Games," said Hildebrand. The region covers all of eastern Utah from Vernal to Moab.

The regional director assured Ghetto Magic of at least seven games at the tournament, but did not mention the schedule or tournament format. The tournament will be a four team affair with medals going to the three top teams.

90% of All Women Affected by PMS in Some Way

200 women exhibiting symptoms of P.M.S. were treated with progesterone. Varying results were reported, as shown in the above bar graph.

PMS Center helps women deal with many symptoms

By LISA A. GRIGG
Universe Staff Writer

One of the world's most common diseases affects 40 percent of all women and severely affects 10 percent of all women sufficiently enough to require medical treatment. PMS is a combination of physical, emotional and behavioral symptoms that occur in the second half of a woman's menstrual cycle, thus interfering with her lifestyle.

The physical symptoms include fatigue, cravings for sweets and salt, and bloating. Examples of the emotional symptoms are depression, anxiety and hostility. Withdrawal and crying are two of the behavioral symptoms.

"The average woman affected by PMS has 25 symptoms," said Carol Belnap, a graduate student in clinical psychology at BYU.

There is a center in Utah Valley where women can seek help if they are suffering from any of the symptoms commonly associated with PMS. The Utah Valley PMS Center offers a free orientation lecture and pre-assessment test to those interested in learning more about PMS.

"Half the women who come here have symptoms that are definitely tied to their cycle," Belnap said. "Some have other problems exacerbated by their cycle, which is labeled secondary PMS." But no one goes away without help, whether it is treatment for PMS or referral to someone who can help with their problem, Belnap said.

According to Marilyn Gertsch, R.N., the center's program director, the most common ages for women affected by PMS are between 30 and 50, but it isn't rare in women younger.

"The average woman is affected by PMS for 10 years before she seeks treatment," Gertsch said. The reason women wait so long to get help is because the symptoms are probably mild at first and become increasingly severe, she said.

According to Belnap, there is a lot of research being done on PMS. "Research suggests that there may be a hereditary component," The University of Utah has been conducting a great deal of research, and there are currently five graduate students doing research at BYU, she said.

Belnap said "a lot of women don't like to talk about it because there is such a negative stereotype involved, people think it is all in the patient's head." Until a few years ago people thought cramps were psychological, now it is realized that they are physiological, she said. "PMS is going the same way."

"It is really scary to talk about PMS because it is such a fad now," said a patient at the center, a senior majoring in fashion design at BYU. "I don't tell many people I have PMS because it could be used against me," she explained. "I don't want to use it as an excuse, but it is definitely an effect on my life."

"I really affects my social life, I can't plan ahead and commit to anything because I never know how I'll feel," she said. "A lot of times I just want to be alone."

The treatment the PMS center uses includes what research has found to be the proper medical treatment. "The appropriate medical treatment for a lot of women is progesterone," Belnap said. "There is some symptom relief from labeling the problem and lifestyle changes, such as diet and exercise."

director. All the students will be part of the summer program, except for Worthey, who will participate in the fall semester program.

Former BYU prof will head Atlanta temple presidency

The First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has announced that Dr. David H. Yarn Jr. of Orem will succeed Robert M. Winston as president of the Atlanta Georgia Temple.

President Yarn, 65, recently retired after 35 years as a professor of philosophy and religion at BYU. His wife, Marilyn Stevenson Yarn, will serve as temple matron.

President Yarn, a Georgia native, earned a bachelor's degree from BYU and holds a masters degree and a doctorate degree from Columbia University. His church service includes branch president, bishop, and stake president.

Mrs. Yarn, a native of Salt Lake City, is also a graduate of BYU, where she has since appeared in a number of motion pictures produced at BYU. She has also served in various church positions. They have six children.

Spouses expected to share housework

NEW YORK (AP) — Should a woman do most of the housework when both she and her husband work? A majority of Americans say no, although the woman is often left with most of the housework anyway, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Women, who comprised one-third of the work force in 1958, today make up 44 percent of all workers. Their increasing numbers in the workplace was seen as a positive trend by nearly half the 1,473 adult Americans polled, while only one-quarter thought it was harmful.

The changing role of women in the workplace, however, has led to several inequities, according to the poll's respondents. For example:

— A man was thought to have a better chance of winning promotion than a woman of equal skill, according to 55 percent of the respondents. Only one-third thought men and women had equal chances of being promoted.

— A man was thought to have a better chance of being hired than a woman, according to 44 percent of the respondents, while 37 percent thought men and women had equal opportunities. Twelve percent said the woman would have an advantage, and the rest were unsure.

— Ninety-three percent of the respondents said spouses should share household cleaning equally when both work full-time outside the home. Yet in 57 percent of the households where both partners worked, women did most of the cleaning.

An equal percentage of men and women said it was good that more women were working outside the home, but women were far more likely than men to say that men held an advantage in hiring and promotions.

Nearly two-thirds of the women said that a man had a better chance than a woman of being promoted when all else was equal. Less than half the men felt the same way. In hiring, 51 percent of women and only 37 percent of men said a man had an advantage over a woman of equal skill.

The poll also found that only 22 percent of the respondents would prefer to work for a man. Nearly three-quarters of the respondents said the sex of their boss was unimportant to them.

Not surprisingly, young people who may not remember the days when mother stayed at home were more likely than older people to accept women in the workplace.

While 60 percent of 18- to 34-year-olds said the increasing number of working women was a good trend, only 36 percent of 55- to 64-year-olds felt that way. Only 28 percent of those over 65 years old thought it was a good trend.

A majority of respondents — 58 percent — also said that women should have an equal chance to do any job men could do. Thirty-nine percent said there were certain jobs a woman shouldn't do, with heavy labor and construction, police and fire services, mining, combat or working with chemicals and explosives cited most often.

Rep. Scheuer desires huge fine for Thiokol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York congressman suggested to the chairman of Morton Thiokol on Tuesday that NASA should invoke a $10 million penalty clause because Thiokol's booster rocket was found to be the cause of the Challenger catastrophe.

In a scathing exchange before the House Science and Technology Committee, Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., also ridiculed Charles Locke for remarks to an interviewer that "this shuttle thing will cost us 10 cents a share."

Scheuer predicted the quote would "go down in the annals of history," for banality and gross insensitivity.

The Rogers commission last week estimated the booster failure as the single cause of the Jan. 28 Challenger accident. A clause in NASA's contract with Morton Thiokol includes a penalty if the failure of a rocket booster causes a catastrophic shuttle accident.

"Would you say that your failure, as you describe it, of the solid rocket motor that failed, would trigger that $10 million fee and the loss of your flight success incentive fee?" Scheuer asked Locke.

"That's a contractual matter that I'll just have to defer to their people to conclude," Locke said. Scheuer replied, "This morning you said it was your rocket motor that failed. Now let's leave the Philadelphia lawyers out of this . . . In this contract it's perfectly clearly stated that in the event of a failure of the solid rocket that $10 million penalty would be triggered and the loss of your . . . flight success incentive fee would be triggered."

Locke said, "The contract is a very complex document," and declined further comment.

Scheuer questioned Locke, saying "In the first page of your statement you talk about the pain and anguish of this tragic accident. Is this what you were referring to when you mentioned to a newspaper correspondent recently that, and I quote, 'this shuttle thing will cost us 10 cents a share this year.'"

Locke replied: "Yes sir it was, and I'd like to clarify the circumstances . . . This was an article by the Wall Street Journal, who asked me to give them a financial view of what the company stood as a result of the shuttle incident, as well as all other factors of the company. So I was simply responding . . ."

Scheuer estimated that the cost of the shuttle accident "to every man, woman and child in the United States," came to "not 10 cents a share but perhaps $20 or $25 a share — and that's not counting the incalculable loss of time we can't put a monetary value on, the trauma to the American people, the incalculable loss in lives, the seven lives that were lost."

Scheuer likened the quote to words he said were spoken by William Vanderbilt in 1882: "The public be damned."

"For over a century that remark has stood unchallenged and unparalleled for its gross insensitivity, for its banality, for its tastelessness. But I believe that you have finally done it," he told Locke.

"Sir, I don't think you can put a financial value on this tragedy at all," the congressman concluded, to which Locke agreed, "You certainly can't." The congressman also said, "Once this commission issues its reports and this thing is closed, it's going to be a different situation."

GM recalling J-body cars for ornament fire hazard

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has recalled 87,000 1985 subcompact cars featuring the J-body platform for removal of a plastic ornament that could cause an engine fire.

The cars include the Chevrolet Cavalier, Oldsmobile Firenza, Buick Skyhawk and Cadillac Cimarron, GM said Monday.

GM said a plastic cap that fits over the air cleaner and is stamped with the words "2.0 Liter Fuel Injection" should be removed and thrown away. Owners can do this easily and don't have to take their cars to dealers, the company said.

The company said mechanics sometimes reassembled air cleaners improperly or left ornaments resting on engine parts, where they melted. GM said it knew of 13 engine fires.

'Hands' fundraiser nets $36 million

They wanted to help. And they have. "Hands Across America" had a goal to raise $50 million for the hungry and homeless in America. To date, they have raised over $36 million for their cause.

"It's been very busy since the event, especially the mail," said Dave Fulton, spokesman for Hands Across America. "A lot of the participants have sent in donations, and that has been the main focus recently."

Fulton said an estimated 5,602,960 people joined hands along the route from Los Angeles to New York, and another estimated 1.5 million people participated in the off-route states.

"We expected a last minute surge of people to take part, and that's exactly what happened," said Marty Rogol, executive director of USA for Africa, of which Hands Across America is a project. More than 60 percent of the people who participated just showed up.

"Although there were physical gaps in the important point is that we were linked in solidarity on the issues of hunger and homelessness," Ken Kragen, organizer of the event.

"I believe we have redefined what hunger homelessness is about. It's the abused mother her child, it's the factory worker who was laid off. It's these people as well as those we normally think of when we talk about the hungry and homeless America," said Fulton.
